The Missing Green Lines

The funny thing about perception is how it creeps up on us before we even realize we have it.

I was so sure, in fact I was convinced that I was seeing the whole picture. After all, had I not been the one to create the image of The 12 Levels of Being three years ago? Had I not used it over and over in all my seminars, brochures, newsletters and web site? I knew what it looked like.

Or did I?

The image you see above is NOT the image you see below. Can you spot the difference?

Don't be too hard on your self if you can't. After all, it took one hawk-eyed, wide awake student, completing Levels 9, 10, 11 and 12 to ask me the question that stopped me in my tracks.

She asked me, "What is time connected to?"

Beginning from the lower triangle and moving up the levels, Level 4 is Time. Infact it is about Timeliness and Timelessness. Green in colour it resonates to the musical note F and represents the heart of our being which is the seat of the soul. Level 4 leads into Level 5, Space and eventually connects us to Level 8, Spiritual Service.

To answer her question I held up a large poster to point out the connection and realised the shocking truth. I had inadvertently neglected to draw any green lines.

How did that happen? How had I missed that and for so many years. How had no-one else ever noticed it until now?

By discovering I had left out the green lines I knew my perception around time and space was being challenged. In fact I was catapulted into the truth about perception.

Perception is totally subjective and therefore has the potential to change at any given moment.

Perception Beliefs and Going Within

Clearly I had separated time from space in way that does not exist. The only way I know how to understand something and to get to the heart of an issue, is to go within.

Going within connects us to our Self. Some call this a Higher Self, some call it our Soul. Some think of this place simply as our heart. Through meditation we re-member our Selves. re-membering is re-connecting to those parts of ourselves that we have temporarily forgotten.

Our perception is limited by how much we have temporarily forgotten.

Although the very act of meditating may not instantly reveal the answer it will always direct you to the next step.

I looked up in the encyclopedia space-time.

"Although time and space here on earth appear separate they are in fact connected. In physics space-time is a model that combines three-dimensional space and one-dimensional time into a single construct called the space-time continuum, in which time plays the role of the 4th dimension."

My sister, Donna Jacobs Sife, then took me to a spiritual truth I had forgotten.

She said, "In the Jewish religion there is an existential imperative that we are to remember.

In Hebrew there is no word for history, only a word to remember. So we must remember the experience of standing at Mt. Sinai and we must remember standing at the Red Sea AND WE MUST REMEMBER because the implication is that these events actually transcend time and space and are available in the here and now for us to experience according to our need or our Intent. They are eternal events, and we each have the power and indeed the right to reconnect and draw inspiration from them. We need simply to call on the energy of Divine liberation, empowerment, grace and miracle - to remember what is possible, what is waiting for us.

We are taught that sacred history is our personal history. It did not happen to other people, but rather we were there at Mt. Sinai. We crossed the red sea, and we were liberated from slavery in Egypt. The event of the red sea splitting exists internally. Its power and its gift goes beyond this concrete world, beyond time and beyond space."
